"SAFE AND SANE FOURTH."

Paris enjoyed a very "safe and sane" Fourth of July last Saturday. There was an entire absence of the usual fireworks on the streets. The banks and postoffice were closed. "Old Glory" floated to the breeze from the flagstaffs on the City Hall and the Government building, and a number of residences were likewise decorated with the "Star Spangled Banner." The only public observance of the day was made by the local colored lodge of Elks, which gave an outing at the Fair Grounds. The small boy found the Fourth a most uneventful day. Railroad excursions to pleasure resorts in Cincinnati and to Blue Grass Park in Lexington, were well patronized.

LOCAL BOY IN "MOVIES."

Paris readers who started Sunday the reading of the prize story of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and who will follow the thread of the story will find added interest through the fact that Maurice Burnaugh, of Paris, formerly sporting editor of The Leader, and more recently in vaudeville and musical comedy, appears as one of the characters in the moving pictures of the story. While in New York recently Mr. Burnaugh danced the Maxxie or, as he says, it is properly styled, the Bresillienne Mattheiche, in company with Marguerite Snow, the leading lady of the film company, who takes the part of the heroine of the story.

This series of pictures will start at the Columbia in this city next week.
